

Crawly School for Bugs

Poems to Drive You Buggy

David L Harrison

Boyd's Mills Press

Honesdale, PA. March 20, 2018

The buzz:

Editorial Reviews

Review

“Poetry and bugs are brought together in this humorously wacky book. This collection will delight young readers and teachers who are in need of entertaining ways to introduce students to poetry. The illustrations match the poems perfectly...for poetry units wherever humor is in demand.” –School Library Journal

“Twenty lighthearted poems imagine the goings-on at insect school. Graceful and humorous, these short poems allude to typical behaviors. With deftly constructed rhyme and rhythm patterns, lively language, and alliteration, his poems have immediate appeal. They're splendidly matched by whimsical cartoons that reward a second look. A cheerful way to make a connection with the natural world.” – Kirkus Reviews

“Writing in rhyme, Harrison imagines a day at a school for insects...Using both traditional and digital media, Bayless offers comedic scenes of anthropomorphic insects decked out in clothes with room for all of their arms. Readers' school days will look downright dull by comparison.” – Publishers Weekly

“Peppy color illustrations and amusing verse combine in this entertaining collection. The lively rhymes nicely complement the delightful, animated multimedia art... with witty, scrutiny-inviting details. (K)ids... will...enjoy the references and humor.” – Booklist